

Beyond Silence

Collaboration Between Arab States and China in the Transnational Repression of Uyghurs

UHRP

UYGHUR HUMAN RIGHTS PROJECT
ئۇيغۇر كىشىلىك ھوقۇق قۇرۇلۇشى

THE OXUS SOCIETY
FOR CENTRAL ASIAN AFFAIRS

About the Uyghur Human Rights Project

The Uyghur Human Rights Project (UHRP) promotes the rights of the Uyghur people through research-based advocacy. We publish reports and analysis in English and Chinese to defend Uyghurs' civil, political, social, cultural, and economic rights according to international human rights standards.

About the Oxus Society for Central Asian Affairs

The Oxus Society for Central Asian Affairs is a DC-based non-profit organization dedicated to fostering academic exchange between Central Asia and the rest of the world.

About the Authors

Bradley Jardine is a dual fellow at the Wilson Center's Kissinger Institute on China and the United States and the Kennan Institute. He also serves as director of research at the Oxus Society for Central Asian Affairs.

Lucille Greer completed this research during a fellowship at the Wilson Center's Kissinger Institute on China and the United States. She is now a Foreign Affairs Specialist in the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for the Middle East. All views and opinions are her own and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Department of Defense.

Acknowledgements

The authors would like to express their appreciation for the expert review and editing of this report by Dr. Elise Anderson, UHRP Senior Program Officer for Research and Advocacy; Reece Thompson, UHRP Development, Outreach, and Research Officer; and Henryk Szadziwski, UHRP Director of Research. They also extend their sincerest thanks to all the Uyghur diaspora members who offered to share their stories of cross-border repression for this report.

Cover art by YetteSu.

© 2022 Uyghur Human Rights Project
1602 L Street NW | Washington, DC 20036
www.uhrp.org | info@uhrp.org

© 2022 Oxus Society for Central Asia Affairs
www.oxussociety.org | info@oxussociety.com

Table of Contents

I.	Executive Summary .....	2
II.	Introduction .....	4
III.	Methods and Findings .....	8
IV.	Mechanisms of China’s Transnational Repression.....	10
	Transnational Digital Surveillance .....	11
	Global War on Terror Narratives.....	15
	Institutions of Islamic Education .....	18
	Pilgrimage as a Tool of Control .....	27
	Passport Weaponization .....	32
V.	China’s Engagement with Arab States over Time.....	36
	Uyghurs in the Arab States.....	40
VI.	Conclusion .....	41
VII.	Recommendations .....	43

I. Executive Summary

This report assesses China's efforts to target Uyghurs in a region they once considered safe: the Arab world. China's transnational repression of Uyghurs in this region has been growing in scale and scope as the country's relations with Arab states have strengthened. According to our dataset, an upper estimate of 292 Uyghurs has been detained or deported from Arab states at China's behest since 2001.

In a stunning example from July 2017, Egyptian police broke into apartments, scoured airports, and raided restaurants and mosques. They were not looking for Egyptian political dissidents but were hunting for Uyghurs on behalf of China's Party-state. More than 200 Uyghurs, mostly students at Al-Azhar University in Cairo, were rounded up. At least 45 of them were rendered or deported to China; some of the 45 have not been heard from again. Interview data suggests that Chinese police were present in Egypt during interrogations, showing Beijing's increasing willingness to intervene in the internal affairs of partner countries.

We have arrived at our upper estimate of 292 Uyghurs detained or deported from Arab states since 2001 in part through data from the China's Transnational Repression of Uyghurs Dataset, a joint initiative by the Oxus Society for Central Asian Affairs and the Uyghur Human Rights Project. We have gathered and analyzed cases of China's transnational repression of Uyghurs in Arab states using original interviews with Uyghurs who have fled the region, reports by experts and witnesses, and public sources in English and Arabic, including government documents, human rights reports, and reporting by credible news agencies. What follows is a comprehensive analysis of how China's repression of Uyghurs has taken hold in Arab states and developed over the past twenty years. At least six Arab states—Egypt, Morocco, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Syria, and the United Arab Emirates (UAE)—have participated in a campaign of transnational repression spearheaded by China that has reached 28 countries worldwide.

China's Party-state uses five primary mechanisms of transnational repression to target Uyghurs in Arab states: 1) transnational digital surveillance, which enables them to track and closely monitor Uyghurs living outside their homeland; 2) Global War on Terror narratives, which serve as justification for the detention or rendering of Uyghurs to China; 3) institutions of Islamic education where Uyghur students enroll, which the Party-state targets for crackdowns; 4) the Hajj and Umrah in Saudi Arabia, which they use to surveil or detain Uyghur pilgrims (a trend accelerating with the increasing involvement of Chinese tech companies in Hajj digital services); and 5) denial of travel documents to Uyghurs in Arab states, rendering them stateless and vulnerable to deportation to the PRC.

To counteract China's repression of Uyghurs in Arab states, we make a number of targeted policy recommendations to national, multilateral, and grassroots actors, including the following:

- Pass measures to protect Uyghur refugees. Governments should establish safe pathways for Uyghurs outside China to apply for resettlement without the need for UNHCR processing. For example, the U.S. Department of State should consider setting ambitious quotas for Uyghurs. Likewise, the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate should pass the complementary Uyghur Human Rights Protection Acts, which grant Priority 2 status for Uyghur and Turkic refugees.
- The international community must make new safe havens and resettle Uyghur refugees as traditional refuges for Uyghurs become scarce.
- Arab governments must utilize international support through Islamic organizations and multilateral organizations to approach the issue as a coalition and halt Chinese transnational repression in the region.
- University officials must intervene by using influence with their governments to find missing Uyghur students and graduates, and protect remaining Uyghur students from undue interference in their safety and education.

II. Introduction

Al-Azhar Mosque and University, one of the jewels of the Islamic world, has stood in Cairo for over a thousand years. It hosts the most prestigious program in Sunni Islamic studies as well as a thriving Arabic literature studies program. But in July 2017, the pride of Islamic education was struck by the heavy hand of China's secularism. On July 1, in collaboration with the Chinese Party-state, Egyptian authorities rounded up Chinese nationals of Uyghur descent.<sup>1</sup> More than 191 Turkic people from the Uyghur Region (also known as the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region),<sup>2</sup> most of them studying at Al-Azhar University, were detained. We identified 65 individuals who were sent to China either via deportation or "voluntarily" after receiving ominous messages from both their relatives and Xinjiang Public Security Bureau officers. Chinese intelligence officers reportedly joined Egyptian security services in Cairo's notorious Tora Prison to interrogate Uyghur students.<sup>3</sup> According to a lawyer representing the students, many of them were physically assaulted, in addition to being denied food or water for extended periods.<sup>4</sup>

Chinese intelligence officers reportedly joined Egyptian security services in Cairo's notorious Tora Prison to interrogate Uyghur students.

---

<sup>1</sup> "Detained Uyghur Students Held by Egypt's Intelligence Service," Radio Free Asia, July 19, 2017, <https://www.rfa.org/english/news/uyghur/students-07192017124354.html>.

<sup>2</sup> Three terminological notes: 1) We refer to the government of the People's Republic of China (PRC) and the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) as the "Party-state" or "Chinese Party-state" as a way of emphasizing one-party rule in China by the CCP and highlighting the difficulties in distinguishing between state and party apparatuses, policies, and actions. 2) We refer to the Uyghur homeland alternately as "East Turkistan" and the "Uyghur Region." A vast majority of Uyghurs prefer these toponyms to those of "Xinjiang" and the "Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region," which they see as offensive colonial terms. In cases where we refer to particular publications or government offices and apparatuses, however, we use "Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region" or related forms such as "XUAR" or "Xinjiang." 3) We refer to the 22 members of the League of Arab States, which all speak a dialect of Arabic and have some shared Arab heritage, as Arab states. We use "states" specifically to highlight the agency of action on governments in this region that participate in transnational repression efforts against Uyghurs and other Turkic Muslims.

<sup>3</sup> Also called the Scorpion Prison, Tora is the secretive fortress where political prisoners and enemies of the Egyptian state are sent and rarely released. For more, see Human Rights Watch, "We Are in Tombs: Abuses in Egypt's Scorpion Prison," September 28, 2016, <https://www.hrw.org/report/2016/09/28/we-are-tombs/abuses-egypts-scorpion-prison>.

<sup>4</sup> Mohamed Mostafa and Mohamed Nagi, "'They are Not Welcome Here': Report on the Uyghur Crisis in Egypt," Association for Freedom of Thought and Expression, October 1, 2017, https://afteegypt.org/en/academic\_freedoms/2017/10/01/13468-afteegypt.html.

Since then, police officials have... operated algorithmic blacklists of 26 primarily Muslim-majority countries deemed "suspicious." Eight of the 26—Algeria, Egypt, Iraq, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Syria, the United Arab Emirates (UAE), and Yemen—are Arab states.

For Uyghurs in their homeland, links to Arab states can be potentially fatal. In 2014, Communist Party General Secretary and President Xi Jinping called for a "People's War on Terror" after a visit to the Uyghur Region in the wake of the Kunming Attack in Yunnan Province, an attack that no terrorist group claimed but state officials named as the work of Uyghur "separatists."<sup>5</sup>

The same year, PRC military contractor China Electronic Technology Group began the process of building a large database of every Uyghur in the Uyghur Region, according to reports. The database would serve as a "preventative policing" program designed to predict one's propensity for "terror."<sup>6</sup> In essence, it was a project to profile millions of Uyghurs and inspect their communications and activities to determine their political loyalty to China. Since then, police officials have created and operated algorithmic blacklists of 26 primarily Muslim-majority countries deemed "suspicious." Eight of the 26—Algeria, Egypt, Iraq, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Syria, the United Arab Emirates (UAE), and Yemen—are Arab states.<sup>7,8</sup> Uyghur students and businesspeople around the world have been recalled, arrested, imprisoned, and even killed on account of these blacklists.<sup>9</sup>

China's transnational repression of Uyghurs has increased as the Party-state unleashed an unprecedented campaign of repression on Uyghurs back in their homeland. In a now-leaked internal speech from 2014, Xi Jinping also called for the state to utilize "the organs of dictatorship" to show "absolutely no mercy" in the "struggle

---

<sup>5</sup> "China Separatists Blamed for Kunming Knife Rampage," BBC, March 2, 2014, www.bbc.com/news/world-asia-china-26404566.

<sup>6</sup> Sean Roberts, The War on the Uyghurs: China's Internal Campaign against a Muslim Minority (Princeton; Oxford: Princeton University Press), 2020, 182.

<sup>7</sup> Maya Wang, "China's Algorithms of Repression: Reverse Engineering a Xinjiang Police Mass Surveillance App," Human Rights Watch, May 1, 2019, <https://www.hrw.org/report/2019/05/01/chinas-algorithms-repression/reverse-engineering-xinjiang-police-mass>.

<sup>8</sup> Maya Wang, "'Eradicating Ideological Viruses': China's Campaign of Mass Repression in Xinjiang," Human Rights Watch, September 9, 2018, <https://www.hrw.org/report/2018/09/09/eradicating-ideological-viruses/chinas-campaign-repression-against-xinjiangs#>.

<sup>9</sup> "Two Uyghurs Returned From Egypt Dead in Chinese Police Custody," Middle East Monitor, December 22, 2017, <https://www.middleeastmonitor.com/20171222-2-uyghur-students-returned-from-egypt-dead-in-china-police-custody/>.

against terrorism, infiltration, and separatism.”<sup>10</sup> The results have been horror at an unprecedented scale accomplished by an all-powerful surveillance state. Since the beginning of the mass internment campaign in 2017, an estimated 1.8 million Uyghurs and other Turkic Muslim peoples have been arbitrarily rounded up in “re-education centers,”<sup>11</sup> with millions more estimated to be incarcerated in the Chinese prison system or performing forced labor in factories around the PRC.<sup>12</sup> Reports of torture,<sup>13</sup> sexual assault,<sup>14</sup> forced sterilization,<sup>15</sup> forced abortion,<sup>16</sup> family separation,<sup>17</sup> and mass surveillance have revealed that the scope of this campaign is totalizing.<sup>18</sup>

The PRC enhanced its relations with Arab states even as it mounted its interment offensive. What began with oil purchases in the 1990s has now blossomed into robust cooperation in trade,

---

<sup>10</sup> Austin Ramzy and Chris Buckley “‘Absolutely No Mercy’: Leaked Files Expose How China Organized Mass Detention of Muslims,” New York Times, September 16, 2019, <https://www.nytimes.com/interactive/2019/11/16/world/asia/china-xinjiang-documents.html>.

<sup>11</sup> Adrian Zenz, “China’s Own Documents Show Potentially Genocidal Forced Sterilization Plans in Xinjiang,” Foreign Policy, August 1, 2020, <https://foreignpolicy.com/2020/07/01/china-documents-uyghur-genocidal-sterilization-xinjiang/>.

<sup>12</sup> Vicky Xiuzhong Xu, Danielle Cave, James Leibold, Kelsey Munro and Nathan Ruser “Uyghurs for Sale,” Australian Strategic Policy Institute, March 1, 2020, <https://www.aspi.org.au/report/uyghurs-sale>.

<sup>13</sup> Rebecca Wright, Ivan Watson, Zahid Mahmood and Tom Booth, “‘Some are just psychopaths’: Chinese detective in exile reveals extent of torture against Uyghurs,” CNN, October 5, 2021, <https://www.cnn.com/2021/10/04/china/xinjiang-detective-torture-intl-hnk-dst/index.html>

<sup>14</sup> Matthew Hill, David Campanale and Joel Gunter, “‘Their goal is to destroy everyone’: Uyghur camp detainees allege systematic rape,” BBC News, February 2, 2021, <https://www.bbc.com/news/world-asia-china-55794071>; see also Ivan Watson and Rebecca Wright, “Allegations of shackled students and gang rape inside China’s detention camps,” CNN, February 19, 2021, <https://www.cnn.com/2021/02/18/asia/china-xinjiang-teacher-abuse-allegations-intl-hnk-dst/index.html>.

<sup>15</sup> “China cuts Uyghur births with IUDs, abortion, sterilization,” The Associated Press, June 29, 2020, <https://apnews.com/article/ap-top-news-international-news-weekend-reads-china-health-269b3de1af34e17c1941a514f78d764c>.

<sup>16</sup> Ayse Wieting, “Uyghur exiles describe forced abortions, torture in Xinjiang,” The Associated Press, June 3, 2021, <https://apnews.com/article/only-on-ap-middle-east-europe-government-and-politics-76acaf6547fb7cc9ef03c0dd0156eab>.

<sup>17</sup> Adrian Zenz, “Break Their Roots: Evidence for China’s Parent-Child Separation Campaign in Xinjiang,” Journal of Political Risk, 7, no. 7, (July 2019), <https://www.jpolrisk.com/break-their-roots-evidence-for-chinas-parent-child-separation-campaign-in-xinjiang/>.

<sup>18</sup> Human Rights Watch, “Break Their Lineage, Break Their Roots,” April 19, 2021, <https://www.hrw.org/report/2021/04/19/break-their-lineage-break-their-roots/chinas-crimes-against-humanity-targeting>.

investment, politics, and security.<sup>19</sup> Through the support or tacit endorsement of Arab governments, China has added some of the strongest voices in the Islamic world to its defense. In 2019, major Arab powers including Saudi Arabia and the UAE were among the 36 countries that signed a letter at the UN endorsing China's policies in the Uyghur Region.<sup>20</sup> During a meeting in Beijing with General Secretary Xi Jinping in 2019, Saudi Arabia's Crown Prince Muhammed bin Salman signaled support for the mass internment campaign when he said, "We respect and support China's right to take counter-terrorism and de-extremism measures to safeguard national security."<sup>21</sup> Furthermore, at least six Arab governments—Egypt, Morocco, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Syria, and the UAE—and their security services have cooperated in China's campaign of transnational repression targeting the global Uyghur population through intimidation, detentions, and renditions back to China, the last of which have virtually guarantee immediate detention in a concentration camp.

At least six Arab governments—Egypt, Morocco, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Syria, and the UAE—and their security services have cooperated in China's campaign of transnational repression.

Drawing from original interviews with witnesses and experts, along with analyses of Arabic-language source materials, this report aims to provide a comprehensive account of China's transnational repression in Arab states today. We provide the first verified upper estimates of detentions and deportations of Uyghurs from Arab states, utilizing original interview data alongside the transnational repression database created by the Oxus Society for Central Asian Affairs (Oxus Society) and Uyghur Human Rights Project (UHRP). We also draw from primary and secondary-source materials to categorize and describe the mechanisms of transnational repression China utilizes most widely in Arab states. Finally, we chart the evolution of these states' collaboration with China in transnational repression from the start of the Global War on Terror to the present day. This report shifts the discussion of Arab states' regional role in

<sup>19</sup> "China is Largest Foreign Investor in the Middle East," Middle East Monitor, July 24, 2017, <https://www.middleeastmonitor.com/20170724-china-is-largest-foreign-investor-in-middle-east/>; World Integrated Trade Solution, "Trade Summary for Middle East & North Africa 2019," <https://wits.worldbank.org/countrysnapshot/en/MEA>.

<sup>20</sup> "Saudi Arabia Defends Letter Backing China's Xinjiang Policy," Reuters, July 18, 2019, <https://www.reuters.com/article/us-china-rights-saudi/saudi-arabia-defends-letter-backing-chinas-xinjiang-policy-idUSKCN1UD36L>.

<sup>21</sup> "Chinese President Meets Saudi Crown Prince," Xinhuanet, February 22, 2019, http://www.xinhuanet.com/english/2019-02/22/c\_137843268.htm.

China's repression of Uyghurs from silence to complicity in an increasingly global "People's War on Terror."<sup>22</sup>

III. Methods and Findings

This report utilizes the China's Transnational Repression of the Uyghurs Database, a research tool built by the Oxus Society in partnership with UHRP to monitor global cases of Uyghurs and other Turkic peoples who have been targets of PRC-led transnational repression beyond China's borders. The China's Transnational Repression of the Uyghurs Database includes 336 fully verified cases of detentions or renditions of Uyghurs living overseas, with an upper total of 1,576 cases that lack complete biographical records of the individuals involved.

We have verified a total of 109 cases in Egypt, Morocco, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Syria, and the UAE with an upper estimate of 292 since 2004. We have based this upper estimate on findings from the China's Transnational Repression of the Uyghurs Database, if we include bulk cases with limited details of particular individuals, or where individuals were reported with pseudonyms or anonymously. These figures rely on reported data, representing just the tip of the iceberg in terms of the number of renditions that are likely occurring according to anonymous interviews conducted by human rights organizations active in the region.

Upper estimate of cases of stage 2 and stage 3 transnational repression in Arab states since 2001
Egypt	274 (90 identified by Oxus and UHRP)
Morocco	1

<sup>22</sup> The phrase "People's War on Terror" is reproduced here critically. Then-XUAR Party Secretary Zhang Chunxian coined the phrase in 2014, deliberately invoking the United States' far-reaching "War on Terror" while inaugurating the "Strike Hard Campaign Against Violent Extremism." As discussed in greater detail within this report, the Chinese Party-state frames expression of religious identity as Islamic extremism, but this construction has a tenuous basis in reality.

Qatar	1
Saudi Arabia	8
Syria	1
UAE	7

Table 1. Upper estimate of cases of stage 2 and stage 3 transnational repression in Arab states Since 2001, Source: China's Transnational Repression of Uyghurs Database, OXUS Society and UHRP.

In compiling the China's Transnational Repression of Uyghurs Database, of which these figures are a part, we have relied on public reporting by investigative journalists in the Middle East and North Africa. Some cases received high-profile coverage by virtue of their personal connections. One example is the case of Ms. Amine, a Uyghur resident of Saudi Arabia and PRC citizen who vanished after visiting China in 2016 after Saudi authorities requested she go there to renew her passport. Her disappearance received attention after her husband Sait bin 'Abood al-Shahrani, a Saudi citizen and father of two children with Allahberdi, made appeals on Saudi social media, as well as in international media.<sup>23</sup> This and other cases of transnational repression discussed in public reporting likely represent just a small fraction of the total renditions and detentions that have occurred in secret.

Amina Allahberdi, a Uyghur resident of Saudi Arabia and PRC citizen [...] vanished after visiting China in 2016 after Saudi authorities requested she go there to renew her passport.

This report also references a number of secondary sources in English, Chinese, and Arabic, including online interviews and personal accounts by Uyghurs undergoing forms of transnational repression, as well as writing in traditional print, digital, broadcast, social media, and government documents. We have used these secondary sources to build a detailed overview of China's transnational campaign to repress the Uyghurs, as well as to evaluate the accuracy of events recounted to us in interviews.

We have supplemented secondary sources with key informant interviews (KII) conducted with prominent activists such as Mohamed Soltan and Sara Gabr. We have also received confidential information from a third KII who requested anonymity. We complemented the KIIs with three Arabic-language interviews with Uyghur refugees in Arab states. These interviewees requested anonymity due to fear of threats on their lives. We selected interviewees based on their expertise in repression in Arab states, professional involvement in key events, and knowledge of China's international policies. These KII interviews provided us with on-the-ground information about and eyewitness accounts of transnational repression in target countries. They also informed us about the larger civil society context in which the repression occurred.

<sup>23</sup> "Interview: 'It Hurts My Heart to See my Children Cry for Their Mother,'" Radio Free Asia, October 14, 2018, <https://www.rfa.org/english/news/uyghur/appeal-09142018145824.html>.

IV. Mechanisms of China's Transnational Repression

Transnational repression of Uyghurs around the world has worsened significantly in recent years. In a 2021 report on transnational repression titled "No Space Left to Run," Oxus and UHRP documented 1,546 cases of stage 2 (arrests and detentions) and stage 3 (refoulements) transnational repression from 1997 to March 2021, demonstrating the growing scale of China's campaign to target Uyghurs abroad.<sup>24</sup> Other organizations have documented this trend as well. From September 2018 to September 2019, Amnesty International interviewed 400 Uyghurs, Kazakhs, Uzbeks, and other Turkic peoples from China living in 22 countries across five continents to assess the degree of targeted repression they have experienced.<sup>25</sup> Safeguard Defenders, an NGO that promotes rule of law, noted China dramatically increased the number of Red Notices submitted through Interpol since 2014 to pursue citizens abroad, including Uyghurs.<sup>26</sup>

---

<sup>24</sup> Bradley Jardine, Edward Lemon, and Natalie Hall, "No Space Left to Run," Oxus Society for Central Asian Affairs and Uyghur Human Rights Project, June 24, 2021, <https://uhrp.org/report/no-space-left-to-run-chinas-transnational-repression-of-uyghurs/>.

<sup>25</sup> "Nowhere Feels Safe," Amnesty International, February 2020, <https://www.amnesty.org/en/latest/research/2020/02/china-uyghurs-abroad-living-in-fear/>.

<sup>26</sup> Safeguard Defenders, "No Room to Run: China's expanded mis(use) of INTERPOL since the rise of Xi Jinping," November 15, 2021, <https://safeguarddefenders.com/en/blog/chinas-use-interpol-exposed-new-report>, 13-14.

The Chinese Party-state uses five primary mechanisms of transnational repression to target Uyghurs in Arab states: 1) transnational digital surveillance, which enables them to track and closely monitor Uyghurs living outside their homeland; 2) Global War on Terror narratives, which serve as justification for the detention or rendering of Uyghurs to China; 3) institutions of Islamic education where Uyghur students enroll, which the Party-state targets for crackdowns; 4) the Hajj and Umrah in Saudi Arabia, which they use to surveil or detain Uyghur pilgrims (a trend accelerating with the increasing involvement of Chinese tech companies in Hajj digital services); and 5) denial of travel documents to Uyghurs in Arab states, rendering them stateless and vulnerable to deportation to the PRC.

Transnational Digital Surveillance

China conducts transnational repression of Uyghurs in Arab states in 2021 by internationalizing algorithmic surveillance systems used in the Uyghur Region—namely the Integrated Joint Operating Platform (IJOP). These systems mine personal data from residents in the Uyghur Region and produce verdicts on whether individuals are “trustworthy” to the Chinese Communist Party. Any connection to an individual in a blacklisted country is grounds for detention and “re-education.” Simply living in these countries may result in immediate detention after crossing the border into PRC territory, as outlined in a CCP document leaked with the “China Cables” in 2019.<sup>27</sup> Since 2017, Party-state officials have called for Uyghurs in Arab states to return home, denying them the appropriate paperwork to travel anywhere other than the PRC. In some cases, the authorities have orchestrated arrests with Arab security services.

A trove of documents leaked in November 2019, known as the “China Cables,” gives observers a glimpse into the state-sanctioned use of technology to target Uyghurs abroad. Some of the leaked cables revealed that police received explicit directives to arrest

---

<sup>27</sup> “Integrated Joint Operating Platform Daily Essentials Bulletin No.2,” International Consortium of Investigative Journalists, November 24, 2019, <https://www.icij.org/investigations/china-cables/read-the-china-cables-documents/>; and Maya Wang “China: Big Data Fuels Crackdown in Minority Region,” Human Rights Watch, February 26, 2018, <https://www.hrw.org/news/2018/02/26/china-big-data-fuels-crackdown-minority-region#>.

Uyghurs with dual citizenship and to track XUAR residents living abroad—some of whom were later deported back to China and arrested. The database categorizes people as “suspicious” for any contact with 26 blacklisted countries, including Algeria, Egypt, Iraq, Libya, Saudi Arabia, Syria, the United Arab Emirates (UAE), and Yemen.<sup>28</sup> Individuals who have been to these countries, have family in these countries, or communicate with people there have been detained, interrogated, and even convicted and imprisoned, usually on charges of “extremism.” According to our data, seven Uyghurs have been detained in Qatar, Morocco, and the UAE—all of which appear in IJOP country blacklists—since 2017. The UAE’s close relationship with Beijing through a Comprehensive Strategic Partnership is of particular concern for Uyghurs in the region because many fear deportation.

China’s embassies and consulates play a key role in the use of technology as a mechanism for transnational repression. In the leaked document “Bulletin No. 2”, 1,535 people originally from the Uyghur Region were flagged as foreign nationals who had applied for a Chinese visa. Among those, 637 had returned to visit the Uyghur Region since June 1, 2016. The directive stated that all individuals on the lists were to be monitored and inspected one by one and that those who had already canceled their Chinese citizenship and were suspected of terrorism should be deported from the PRC back to their country of origin.<sup>29</sup> The directive added that those who were suspected of terrorism but still retain Chinese citizenship should be sent to reeducation camps. It also noted that 4,341 other XUAR residents had received valid travel documents abroad from Chinese embassies and consulates to study in countries such as Egypt.<sup>30</sup>

According to information revealed in the China Cables, students returning from overseas risk being arrested on the spot:

For those still outside the country for whom suspected terrorism cannot be ruled out, the border control reading will be carried out by hand to ensure that they are arrested the moment they cross the border.

---

<sup>28</sup> “‘Eradicating Ideological Viruses’: China’s Campaign of Mass Repression in Xinjiang,” Human Rights Watch, September 9, 2018, <https://www.hrw.org/report/2018/09/09/eradicating-ideological-viruses/chinas-campaign-repression-against-xinjiangs#>.

<sup>29</sup> “Integrated Joint Operating Platform Daily Essentials Bulletin No.2,” International Consortium of Investigative Journalists, November 24, 2019, <https://www.icij.org/investigations/china-cables/read-the-china-cables-documents/>.

<sup>30</sup> Ibid.

For those still outside the country for whom suspected terrorism cannot be ruled out, the border control reading will be carried out by hand to ensure that they are arrested the moment they cross the border.<sup>31</sup>

This policy was in place in 2017 when Uyghur Region security officials sent out calls for Uyghurs living abroad to return in order to “register” themselves.<sup>32</sup> It was the fate that met Uyghur students Abdusalam Mamat and Yasinjan, who had studied at Al-Azhar since 2015. They volunteered to return to the Uyghur Region after receiving an order to do so in 2017. Both were arrested on their arrival and later died in Chinese police custody, despite having no underlying illnesses that would have contributed to their deaths.<sup>33</sup>

An entire government database that targets Uyghurs also leaked recently, providing further insight. In March 2021, the Shanghai Public Security Bureau (PSB), a police force that engages in intelligence gathering, was hacked and 1.1 million surveillance records were leaked. One of the revelations from this trove of documents was that an unprotected database with the codename “Uyghur Terrorist,” was part of an open-source database accessible by security agencies around the world. The presence of this platform is just a small glimpse into the enormous scope of China’s international campaign against Uyghurs.<sup>34</sup> More than 400 individuals in the database flagged for in-person examination were minors, some of whom were as young as five years old.<sup>35</sup>

---

<sup>31</sup> Ibid.

<sup>32</sup> Jessica Bake “China is Forcing Uyghurs Abroad to Return Home. Why Aren’t More Countries Refusing to Help?” ChinaFile, August 14, 2017, <https://www.chinafile.com/reporting-opinion/viewpoint/china-forcing-uyghurs-abroad-return-home-why-arent-more-countries>.

<sup>33</sup> “2 Uyghur Students Returned from China, Dead in Chinese Police Custody,” Middle East Monitor, December 22, 2017, <https://www.middleeastmonitor.com/20171222-2-uyghur-students-returned-from-egypt-dead-in-china-police-custody/>.

<sup>34</sup> “Australians Flagged in Shanghai Security Files Which Shed Light on China’s Surveillance State and Monitoring of Uyghurs,” ABC (Australia), April 1, 2021, <https://www.abc.net.au/news/2021-04-01/shanghai-files-shed-light-on-china-surveillance-state/100040896>.

<sup>35</sup> Shockingly, the database also included information on more than 5,000 foreigners flagged for further monitoring simply because they traveled to Shanghai. “Australians Flagged in Shanghai Security Files Which Shed Light on China’s Surveillance State and Monitoring of Uyghurs,” ABC (Australia), April 1, 2021, <https://www.abc.net.au/news/2021-04-01/shanghai-files-shed-light-on-china-surveillance-state/100040896>.

Participation in Islamic education is also evaluated by the CCP's algorithms. Islamic education institutions in Arab states, previously a draw for Uyghurs due to their prestige and generous scholarship funding, are particularly vulnerable to algorithmic targeting. In today's surveillance climate, studying Islam and residing in a blacklisted country virtually guarantees detention in camps. The 2017 crackdown on Al-Azhar students is the most well-known example, but similar crackdowns also occurred at least at the Islamic University of Madinah in Saudi Arabia. An anonymous interviewee told us that 10 students and graduates of that university have vanished into the PRC system of re-education centers, likely due to the Islamic nature of their studies. We were able to independently verify one of these students. PRC repression may extend to other Islamic education institutions in Arab states as well. In 2021, Uyghur students at Islamic universities in these countries are in very real danger of being detained and potentially deported to the PRC.

The Hajj and Umrah in Saudi Arabia have become snares to collect Uyghurs as they conduct pilgrimages. Since 2018, four Uyghurs have been seized and forcibly repatriated to China while they performed religious duties in Mecca and Medina. Additionally, Chinese tech companies like Huawei are becoming involved in Hajj digital services, opening the door for surveillance technology to play a role in Saudi Arabia as it has in the Uyghur Region. Undertaking Hajj and Umrah in 2021 can be dangerous for Uyghurs even if they have legal permanent residency in third countries.

Reporting from August 2021 suggests the UAE may be functioning as a regional intelligence hub for Chinese intelligence and security services. In 2019 Norway-based Uyghur activist Abduweli Ayup spoke with three Uyghurs in Turkey who had been forced to spy on the diaspora there for China's government. The men said they flew to Dubai to collect burner phones and payment from Chinese intelligence officers stationed in the UAE.<sup>36</sup> The men's claims match other claims made in August 2021 by Jasur Abibula, a Netherlands-based Uyghur and former husband of Asiye Abdulahed. Ms. Asiye rose to prominence for leaking the "China Cables" about the mass incarceration program in the Uyghur Region

The agents reportedly handed him a USB and instructed him to insert it into his ex-wife's computer to infect it with spyware. The MSS reportedly offered him cash, a room in the Hilton, and toys for his children.

<sup>36</sup> "Detainee Says China has Secret Prison in Dubai, Holds Uyghurs," Associated Press, August 16, 2021, <https://apnews.com/article/china-dubai-uyghurs-60d049c387b99b1238ebd5f1d3bb3330>.

to the International Consortium of Investigative Journalists.<sup>37</sup> Mr. Jasur said he was lured to Dubai where he met with two MSS officers. The agents reportedly handed him a USB and instructed him to insert it into his ex-wife's computer to infect it with spyware. The MSS reportedly offered him cash, a room in the Hilton, and toys for his children.<sup>38</sup> According to Mr. Jasur, the officers were prone to using sticks as well as carrots in their recruitment efforts. During a drive past the sand dunes outside Dubai, one of the men informed him: "If we kill and bury you here, nobody will ever be able to find your body."<sup>39</sup> Mr. Jasur, now in the Netherlands, showed international media photos of the agents, along with his hotel and plane tickets to support his allegations. The same Associated Press report also suggested the Chinese Party-state may be operating black site detention facilities in Dubai, but was unable to verify these claims.<sup>40</sup> We have also been unable to verify these claims; over the course of writing this report, we did not encounter any similar claims except in a confidential 2021 ICC court filing which suggested a black site detention facility may be operated by China from Dushanbe Airport in Tajikistan.

Global War on Terror Narratives

When the United States declared its Global War on Terror (GWOT) in 2001, China ushered in a new phase of its decades-long campaign against the Uyghurs by capitalizing on the heightened security environment to pursue refugees, falsely labeling them as "terrorists." In exchange for Chinese support of its invasion of Iraq, the U.S. government designated the East Turkestan Islamic Movement (ETIM) as a terrorist organization in 2002 as a quid pro quo.<sup>41</sup> By labeling ETIM as a terrorist organization, the Party-state could arbitrarily declare nearly any Uyghur group or individual to be

---

<sup>37</sup> Ibid.

<sup>38</sup> Ibid.

<sup>39</sup> Ibid.

<sup>40</sup> "Detainee Says China has Secret Prison in Dubai, Holds Uyghurs," Associated Press, August 16, 2021, <https://apnews.com/article/china-dubai-uyghurs-60d049c387b99b1238ebd5f1d3bb3330>.

<sup>41</sup> "U.S. Removes Group Condemned by China From 'Terror' List," Al Jazeera, November 7, 2020, <https://www.aljazeera.com/news/2020/11/7/us-removes-group-condemned-by-china-from-terror-list>.

members or associates of ETIM and therefore terrorists, which made the U.S designation a potent aid in—and arguably a model for—persecution in the Uyghur Region.

With the GWOT underway, prominent Uyghur cultural figures worldwide found themselves facing ever greater scrutiny. One such figure was Ahmatjan Osman in Syria, a Uyghur poet known across Arab states for his classical verse. Mr. Ahmatjan has argued that Chinese authorities put pressure on Syria in 2004 to deport him out of fear that his poetry would unite Uyghur nationalists abroad.<sup>42</sup> Ahmatjan had to apply to the United Nations for refugee status after being expelled from Syria despite having lived there for 15 years, being married to a Syrian national, and having two children born in that country. When the news emerged that Syrian authorities had expelled Ahmatjan, 270 prominent figures in the world of Arabic poetry, including the Syrian poet and Nobel Literature Prize nominee Adunis, signed a petition and staged a protest against the deportation order.<sup>43</sup> He was granted Canadian citizenship in October 2004 and has been living in Canada since.

Uyghurs fell victim to GWOT narratives in the Gulf in 2008. That year, Uyghur men named Abdelsalam Abdallah Salim (a resident of al-Ain) and Akbar Omar (a resident of Dubai) were imprisoned in the UAE in connection with an alleged plot to blow up the dragon statue in front of Dubai's Dragon Mart during the Summer Olympics in Beijing.<sup>44</sup> After two years in solitary confinement in al-Wathba Prison in Abu Dhabi, the men were sentenced to a further 10 years imprisonment in June 2010, reportedly without any judicial proceedings or legal support, a violation of their rights under the UAE's Code of Criminal Procedures.<sup>45</sup> Human rights observers speculated that they would

---

<sup>42</sup> "Ahmatjan Osman Speaks to Haleh Salah on His Experience as a Student in Syria [أحمد جان عثمان يتحدث ل هالة صالح عن تجربته كطالب في سوريا]," BBC Arabic, July 10, 2017, <https://www.bbc.com/arabic/tv-and-radio-40557722>; "Syria President al-Assad visits China," China Daily, June 22, 2004.

<sup>43</sup> "Ahmatjan Osman Speaks to Haleh Salah on His Experience as a Student in Syria [أحمد جان عثمان يتحدث ل هالة صالح عن تجربته كطالب في سوريا]," BBC Arabic, July 10, 2017, <https://www.bbc.com/arabic/tv-and-radio-40557722>.

<sup>44</sup> Hassan Hassan, "Uighur terrorists jailed for DragonMart bomb plot," The National UAE, July 1, 2010, <https://www.thenationalnews.com/uae/courts/uighur-terrorists-jailed-for-dragonmart-bomb-plot-1.583748?>

<sup>45</sup> "الامارات العربية المتحدة: فريق العمل يؤكد الطابع التعسفي للاحتجاز مواطنين من الويغور" [United Arab Emirates: Task Force Confirms the Arbitrary Nature of the Detention of Uyghur Citizens], Alkarama, be deported to China to serve their sentence there. The details of their case provide room for doubt over the validity of the charges against them. One report at the time indicated that the Chinese Embassy notified local authorities about the two men, whose names have been obscured in English-language coverage to the Sinicized variants Mayma Ytiming Shalmo and Wimiyaar Ging Kimili respectively.<sup>46</sup> Furthermore, the men's initial confessions had been coerced "through fear," and the translators—from Uyghur to Mandarin and then into Arabic—were provided by China, which also sent translators and representatives to attend the hearings.

Their case was referred to the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) Working Group on Arbitrary Detentions in 2011. The Working Group released its opinion the following February as A/HRC/WGAD/2011/34. When the Working Group contacted the Emirati government for a response, the UAE did not deny the delayed trial, use of torture, confessions obtained under the threat of rendition to China and the death penalty, and the absence of legal proceedings and support. The UN stated it "deplores that the [UAE] Government has not provided it with the necessary elements to rebut these allegations." On the question of expulsion to China after their sentencing, the official response from the UAE was that "the Government considers that it will be undertaken pursuant to the treaty between the two countries that includes a provision allowing them to serve their sentence in their own country." Based on the evidence presented, the Working Group ruled the detention of the two men in the UAE as arbitrary.<sup>47</sup> We could not independently verify whether they were rendered to China, but given the official response of the UAE government and China's own policies, this outcome seems likely. There has been no information about the two men since their sentencing in 2010.

[T]he men's initial confessions had been coerced "through fear," and the translators—from Uyghur to Mandarin and then into Arabic—were provided by China.

---

November 20, 2011, <https://www.alkarama.org/ar/articles/alamarat-alrbyat-almthdt-fryq-almlywkd-altab-altsfy-llahtjaz-mwatnyn-mn-alwyghwr>.

<sup>46</sup> "Two Chinese Uyghurs Jailed for Failed UAE Bomb Plot - Paper," Reuters, July 1, 2010, <https://www.reuters.com/article/instant-article/idUSLDE66004X>.

<sup>47</sup> "Opinions Adopted by the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention at its sixty-first session, 29 August - 2 September 2011 - No. 34/2011 (United Arab Emirates)," United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, February 28, 2012, https://ap.ohchr.org/documents/dpage\_e.aspx?.

The recent case of Idris Hasan (also known as Aishan Yideresi), who was detained in Morocco in July 2021, highlights China's use of overlapping mechanisms such as international organizations like Interpol and bilateral extradition treaties to pursue Uyghurs. Mr. Idris, a computer engineer, worked as a translator for a Uyghur diaspora news outlet in Turkey documenting China's repression in the Uyghur Region. As he began to fear for his safety following several detentions by Turkish authorities, he chose to flee to Morocco, but was detained on July 19 in Casablanca Airport and sent to a prison near Tiflet.<sup>48</sup> Representatives of the Chinese Party-state issued an Interpol Red Notice for his capture, alleging Mr. Idris was a "member of ETIM."<sup>49</sup> This accusation was found to be without evidence and Interpol suspended the Red Notice on August 2021, citing its bylaws forbidding persecution on political, religious, or ethnic grounds.<sup>50</sup> Moroccan courts proceeded to try Mr. Idris however, referencing its own extradition treaty with China from 2016—part of a strategic partnership between the two countries that included economic and financial investments.<sup>51</sup> Mr. Idris has been unable to speak with his wife and three children since his detention. On December 16, 2021, the Court of Cassation in Morocco ordered his extradition.<sup>52</sup>

Institutions of Islamic Education

Islamic education has also become a mechanism for China's transnational repression of Uyghurs in Arab states. Following the harsh suppression of Islam during the Cultural Revolution (1966–1976), the PRC began to support the recovery of Islam in China in the 1980s. The Party-state established ten Islamic education colleges throughout China, including in Ürümqi, and provided tuition and stipends to students to pursue formal training as imams. This granted the authorities a high level of control over Islamic

---

<sup>48</sup> Ehsan Azigh, "Moroccan Court Rules in China's Favor to Extradite Uyghur Accused on 'Terrorism,'" Radio Free Asia, December 16, 2021, <https://www.rfa.org/english/news/uyghur/idris-hasan-12162021175312.html>.

<sup>49</sup> Ibid.

<sup>50</sup> Ibid.

<sup>51</sup> Ibid.

<sup>52</sup> Ibid.

instruction with the power of selection for teachers and students. As the government walked back funding for students at domestic Islamic colleges in the late-1980s, scholarships from other countries compelled Uyghur and other Muslim students to pursue Islamic studies abroad.<sup>53</sup>

Islamic education for Chinese Muslims in the PRC and abroad was drastically affected by the Global War on Terror. Worldwide perceptions of Islamic education changed, particularly the perception of Islamic education in Arab states. In China, the government viewed Islamic education, particularly in the Uyghur Region, as a source of insecurity. Officials repackaged the rhetorical issue of “separatism” alongside terrorism and extremism.

Overwhelmingly, access to Islamic education in the Uyghur Region began to taper off in the early 2000s. Youth were banned from attending mosque prayers, as well as pursuing any kind of religious education in underground madrasas. The cessation of Islamic education and practice gained massive momentum after the declaration of the “People’s War on Terror” in 2014 and the Strike Hard Against Violent Terrorism campaign the same year.<sup>54</sup> This pivot towards the repression of Islam seems counterproductive, given the role that international Islamic exchange has and could still play in the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI).<sup>55</sup>

China’s approach to overseas religious education in Arab states has taken a dramatic turn over the past four years. In Egypt, the trouble began in September 2016, according to the local Uyghur community. Sheikh Mahmoud Muhammed, the trustee of the Association of Muslim Scholars of East Turkistan, who lived in Egypt during this period, claims that the Chinese embassy in Cairo was alarmed when Egyptian security services approved 600 Uyghur students to study at Al-Azhar, bringing the total number of students

[T]his unusually large number of students “prompted the embassy to coordinate with Beijing to act swiftly and stem the number of students [...]”

<sup>53</sup> Jackie Armijo, “Islamic Education in China: Rebuilding Communities and Expanding Local and International Networks,” Harvard Asia Quarterly, 10, no. 1 (Winter 2006), 15–24, archived at: <https://web.archive.org/web/20061206011820/http://www.asiaquarterly.com/content/view/166/43/>.

<sup>54</sup> Dilmurat Mahmut, “Controlling Religious Knowledge and Education for Countering Religious Extremism: Case Study of the Uyghur Muslims in China,” Forum for International Research in Education, 5, no. 1 (2019): 22–43.

<sup>55</sup> Fuquan Li, “The Role of Islam in the Development of the ‘Belt and Road’ Initiative,” Asian Journal of Middle Eastern and Islamic Studies, 12, no. 1, (2018).

there to 3,000 by 2017. Muhammed says that this unusually large number of students “prompted the embassy to coordinate with Beijing to act swiftly and stem the number of students, fearing the increase might constitute a threat in the future.” Per Muhammad’s second-hand testimony, the Chinese government accused Al-Azhar of accepting Chinese students without the government’s approval.<sup>56</sup> We interviewed an anonymous Uyghur student who also made the claim that there were 3,000 Uyghur students of Islamic sciences and Arabic language at Al-Azhar University.<sup>57</sup> Sara Gabr, with the Egyptian Commission for Rights and Freedoms (hereafter “Egyptian Commission”), documented cases during the crackdown and echoes this as a possible cause espoused by the larger Egyptian Uyghur community.<sup>58</sup>

In May 2017, students studying abroad began receiving calls from Chinese authorities to return to the Uyghur Region by the end of the month lest they suffer consequences. As students began to hear about detentions, many vowed to remain in Egypt until their school term ended, or even attempted to flee into Turkey where they were stopped by border guards.<sup>59</sup> In June, Uyghurs in Egypt began receiving calls that their family members back home would be arrested if the students did not return, according to Gabr.<sup>60</sup> Bai Kecheng, chairman of the Chinese consulate-affiliated Chinese Students and Scholars Association in Egypt, meanwhile, denied any knowledge of the orders for Uyghurs to return.<sup>61</sup>

Our anonymous student interviewee relayed that Uyghur students heard that trouble was coming a month or two before July. That April, the PRC banned beards, traditional Islamic baby names and Hijabs in the Uyghur Region, a dark portent for what was to

---

<sup>56</sup> Khaled al-Masry, “Uighur Muslims in Egypt: A Welcoming Journey Ending with Deportation,” Daraj, January 23, 2020, <https://daraj.com/en/49283/>.

<sup>57</sup> Anonymous Uyghur Student. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online voice chat. Washington, DC, May 6, 2021.

<sup>58</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>59</sup> “Uyghurs Studying Abroad Ordered Back to Xinjiang Under Threat to Families,” Radio Free Asia, May 9, 2017, <https://www.rfa.org/english/news/uyghur/ordered-05092017155554.html>.

<sup>60</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>61</sup> Ibid.

come domestically and abroad. Uyghur students in Egypt exchanged messages over WhatsApp or in hushed conversation as they went about their daily lives, questioning whether the rumors that China was coming for them were true. Some chose to flee Egypt for Turkey or other countries, but most stayed. Some had been legal residents in Egypt for over a decade. They believed that they would be safe and far from China's persecution at Al-Azhar. The interviewee was astonished when the police came for them.<sup>62</sup> The Uyghurs Gabr spoke with also had believed that Al-Azhar would protect them. Furthermore, Gabr relayed that Uyghurs were arrested as early as April. Men were arrested and disappeared while women and children were allowed to flee to Turkey. By her unverified tally in the summer of 2017, between 400 and 500 detentions occurred in the few months before the crackdown in Cairo. During this time, an estimated 194 arrests occurred in Mansoura, which hosts a satellite campus of al-Azhar.<sup>63</sup> We have been unable to independently verify this number.

By July 2017, Egyptian security forces were arresting dozens of Uyghurs, most of them Al-Azhar students in Cairo. Initial estimates based on Arabic-language reporting suggested that 70 Uyghurs were arrested that month around the Nasr City district of Cairo, while 20 others were arrested at the Burj al-Arab Airport in Alexandria. Additional reporting has since placed this figure at 200 arrests total.<sup>64</sup> The Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms had the same unverified tally.<sup>65</sup> The security crackdown truly began on July 3, 2017, as police raided a popular Cairo Uyghur restaurant Aslam. The detainees were initially held in the police stations of Nasr City I and II, Elkhalfah, Elsalam II, El Nozha, and Heliopolis,

In this round of arrests/detentions, women and children as young as fourteen and fifteen were arrested.

---

<sup>62</sup> Anonymous Uyghur Student. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online voice chat. Washington, DC, May 6, 2021.

<sup>63</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>64</sup> "Uyghurs Arrested in Egypt Face Unknown Fate," Al Jazeera, July 27, 2017, <https://www.aljazeera.com/features/2017/7/27/uyghurs-arrested-in-egypt-face-unknown-fate>.

<sup>65</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

according to reports at the time.<sup>66</sup> In this round of arrests/detentions, women and children as young as fourteen and fifteen were arrested.

In a June 2021 interview, Gabr told us that 70 Uyghurs had been detained in the Nasr City police station and 80 at Elkhalfah. The Uyghur detainee she was in contact with reported that Chinese officers conducted group interrogations in Mandarin and struck detainees in front of each other. Most of the people in these interrogations were forced to sign papers confessing their involvement with terrorist groups. In addition to police stations, several Uyghurs were taken to the Mogamma, a catch-all administrative building that handles paperwork for foreign residents. Officials there deported Uyghurs who had no legal status to China and canceled the legal status of others before sending them to third countries. From the police stations, some Uyghurs were singled out by Chinese officials, made to sign papers confessing terrorist associations, handcuffed and blindfolded, and sent to the Chinese embassy, where they were interrogated and then disappeared. The Egyptian Commission on Rights believes at least three were deported to China and then executed, although they have been unable to verify these details.<sup>67</sup> We have been unable to independently verify the claim thus far.

Our anonymous interviewee stated the largest wave of detentions occurred around 9:00 p.m. on July 4. Police came for Uyghur students in their houses, in restaurants, and on the streets. They raided Masjid Musa, the main mosque for Cairo's Uyghur community.<sup>68</sup> Gabr heard reports of two Uyghur men arrested at a mosque but was unable to verify details at the time.<sup>69</sup> Some students were able to hide in other districts of the city, as District Seven—Nasr City—was known as a Uyghur neighborhood. Friends and classmates called made phone calls and exchanged messages on

---

<sup>66</sup> "Uyghurs Arrested in Egypt Face Unknown Fate," Al Jazeera, July 27, 2017, <https://www.aljazeera.com/features/2017/7/27/uyghurs-arrested-in-egypt-face-unknown-fate>.

<sup>67</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>68</sup> Anonymous Uyghur Student. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online voice chat. Washington, DC, May 6, 2021.

<sup>69</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

WhatsApp, desperate to find out if they were safe.<sup>70</sup> Gabr, whose grandfather owned a building on a majority-Uyghur street, recalls seeing Uyghur women and children running in the night as police cars circled.<sup>71</sup>

Security forces had reportedly gained information on where Uyghurs were living from landlords and real estate brokers. After entering their homes and arresting them, the police confiscated students' personal effects, including cell phones, laptops, and books, and searched for hints of "extremist" ideology, according to Abd al-Akhir, a former student who fled Egypt. Al-Akhir said in an interview in 2020, "When the campaign was launched, I was outside with my family and one of my friends called and warned me about it. I spent several nights, with my wife and three children, running away from Cairo. I ended up staying in the countryside with one of my teachers. We knew about a certain 'wanted' list at the airport. I was scared, thank God I wasn't on that list and fled to safety."<sup>72</sup>

Gabr also believes that the authorities were targeting a specific list of names. In her estimation, security officials would go to one address to arrest a specific individual. If that individual was not present, they picked up whoever was at the time. Sometimes, the police came to Uyghur houses with instructions such as you have three or four days to gather your money and your papers, and get out. Gabr told us that 30 Uyghurs were arrested at Cairo International Airport; three to five were arrested at Burj Al-Arab International Airport in Alexandria, and three were arrested at Hurghada International Airport near Sharm el-Sheikh as they attempted to flee the country. Gabr theorized that the arrests outside of Cairo could be due to the presence of Al-Azhar University satellite campuses in Alexandria that might have hosted Uyghur students. Political refugees in Egypt commonly use airports outside of Cairo to escape, as there may be a smaller security presence outside of the capital. The Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms, along with other

Sometimes, the police came to Uyghur houses with instructions such as *you have three or four days to gather your money and your papers, and get out.

<sup>70</sup> Anonymous Uyghur Student. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online voice chat. Washington, DC, May 6, 2021.

<sup>71</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>72</sup> Khaled al-Masry, "Uighur Muslims in Egypt: A Welcoming Journey Ending with Deportation," Daraj, January 23, 2020. <https://daraj.com/en/49283/>.

organizations, attempted to send lawyers to the airports to assist fleeing Uyghurs but were turned away in most cases.

While most Uyghurs stopped at the airport were allowed to flee to Turkey or Malaysia, three or four were sent to China by Gabr's count. The Egypt Commission, working with Amnesty International, verified that twelve people were extradited back to China in the July 2017 crackdown. Gabr suspects that the actual number was much higher.<sup>73</sup> A later bulletin from Amnesty International put the total number of deportations at 22.<sup>74</sup> The Commission's source, a Uyghur detainee who sometimes had access to a phone while in police custody, disappeared in October that year. We have had limited information access since. As Uyghurs fled Egypt or went into hiding, following up on the fates of detainees became extremely challenging. The crackdown drastically diminished the once-vibrant Uyghur communities in Cairo and elsewhere.<sup>75</sup> On the basis of data in our China's Transnational Repression Dataset, we estimate 274 cases of Uyghur detentions and deportations have occurred from Egypt since 2001.

We learned in another interview that Chinese police coordinated their crackdown in Dubai to round up Uyghur students who attempted to enter the UAE after fleeing the crackdown in Egypt.<sup>76</sup> Maryam (pseudonym) had been working in the UAE since 2012. In 2017, she witnessed Chinese security services attempting to intercept Uyghurs in Dubai who had fled the crackdown at Al-Azhar. According to Maryam, Chinese officers entered a Uyghur restaurant in Dubai where she was eating and showed patrons photographs of Uyghur "fugitives" from Egypt in a bid to gain information about their current whereabouts.<sup>77</sup> "We were all so shocked!" she told us. Maryam's account speaks to how China's

---

<sup>73</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>74</sup> Amnesty International, "Egypt: Further information: More Uighur students at risk of forcible return," August 1, 2017, <https://www.amnesty.org/download/Documents/MDE1268482017ENGLISH.pdf>.

<sup>75</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>76</sup> Maryam (Pseudonym), a Uyghur living in the United Arab Emirates. Interview by Bradley Jardine. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 25, 2021.

<sup>77</sup> Ibid.

security services coordinate their activities across Arab states, as elsewhere, to find and coerce Uyghurs living abroad. Uyghurs who flee from one country into a second and even a third are at risk of relentless surveillance and pursuit. As a result, Uyghurs fleeing across sovereign boundaries, often at great risk to themselves and their families, are unable to escape the reach of the Chinese government.

Maryam's encounters with the police did not stop at her experience in the Dubai restaurant. She told us:

Chinese officers also visited the house I was living in with other Uyghurs. They said the owner gave them an advertisement to rent rooms and that they wished to inspect the building. The owner is our friend, however, and we called to ask whether she had given them permission to enter. She said no such permission had ever been given and instructed us to refuse them entry.

According to Maryam, other Uyghurs in her district had similar encounters with plainclothes officers during that time.<sup>78</sup>

A security source explained the crackdown during statements to Egypt's al-Masry al-Youm newspaper days later on July 9, 2017, saying,

[I]t comes within the framework of normal security procedures carried out by security authorities in the country to check the residences of foreigners, and that preliminary investigations and examination of seized papers indicated that a number of them violated conditions of residence in the country.<sup>79</sup>

This argument does not stand up to scrutiny, however, since Egypt authorities have never undertaken a crackdown this severe against other groups of foreign students. The same source denied news of the deportation of any Uyghurs to China. Our data records at least 46 fully verified cases in which Uyghur students were coerced to leave or deported from Egypt and then arrested on arrival to another country, with an additional 30 students whose details after detention remain unclear. Some of those students who “chose” to leave, such as Sami Bari, have faced particularly harsh sentences. Sami, a student who left Egypt after receiving a call to return home, was later sentenced to life imprisonment.<sup>80</sup>

Our data records at least 46 fully verified cases in which Uyghur students were coerced to leave Egypt and then arrested on arrival to another country, with an additional 30 students whose details after detention remain unclear.

<sup>78</sup> Ibid.

<sup>79</sup> Asam Abu Sadira, "[A security source denies the deportation of 'Uyghur students': normal procedures for examining the papers of foreigners] إجراءات طبيعية: «طلاب الإيغور»"، al-Masry al-Youm, July 9, 2017, <https://www.almasryalyoum.com/news/details/1160174>.

Initially, Al-Azhar denied news of the mass arrests. The Al-Azhar Media Centre released a statement saying, “The Al-Azhar Media Centre watched closely the news circulated on social media websites of arrests of Turkestani students, and denied the arrest of any students inside the Al-Azhar University campus or any of the Al-Azhar institutes.” However, a consultant to Al-Azhar, Mohammad Muhani, confirmed that something unusual occurred, stating on Egyptian television that “forty-three people were arrested, including three Al-Azhar students.”<sup>81</sup> Organizations like the Egyptian Commission and members of the Uyghur community attempted to reach out to the administration at Al-Azhar but received no response.<sup>82</sup>

The Egyptian press offered only minimal coverage of the crackdown. A commentary piece ran in al-Masry al-Youm claimed it was China’s natural right to protect its own security and this was not an Egyptian problem. It also added that Uyghur students should have listened to their government’s orders to return home months ago and thus avoided this treatment.<sup>83</sup> China’s hand in the events at Al-Azhar was further fueled by news from June of a security agreement signed between the Egyptian Ministry of the Interior and the PRC’s Ministry of Public Security, as well as of reports of Chinese security personnel present during interrogations.<sup>84</sup> The

---

<sup>80</sup> “Uyghur Group Defends Detainee Database After Xinjiang Officials Allege ‘Fake Archive,’” Radio Free Asia, February 11, 2021, <https://www.rfa.org/english/news/uyghur/database-02112021174942.html>.

<sup>81</sup> Khaled al-Masry, “Uighur Muslims in Egypt: A Welcoming Journey Ending with Deportation,” Daraj, January 23, 2020. <https://daraj.com/en/49283/>.

<sup>82</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>83</sup> Islam al-Ghazouli, “[Chinese Crisis] أزمة صينية,” al-Masry al-Youm, July 22, 2017, <https://www.almasryalyoum.com/news/details/1166250>.

<sup>84</sup> “‘They are Not Welcome Here’: Report on the Uyghur Crisis in Egypt,” Freedom of Thought and Expression Law Firm, October 1, 2017, https://afteegypt.org/en/academic\_freedoms/2017/10/01/13468-afteegypt.html.

Egyptian Interior Minister, Magdy Abdel Ghaffar, met with China's Deputy Minister of Public Security, Chen Zhimin, during his visit to Cairo in June 2017. According to a statement from the Egyptian government, they discussed a number of specialized security fields, including the spread of terrorism and extremist ideologies during their visit.<sup>85</sup> Gabr also tied arrests to this visit in her assessment of the timeline of events.<sup>86</sup> Given Beijing's longstanding attitude that Uyghurs are a "terrorist threat" and the fact that the crackdown occurred just one month after this visit, we find it likely that officials discussed the status of Uyghur students at Al-Azhar University during Chen's visit to Cairo.

Pilgrimage as a Tool of Control

China seeks to control the Hajj to insulate its Muslim population from the wider Islamic community. The Hajj pilgrimage to Mecca and Medina, the holy cities of Islam, is one of the five sacred pillars of the Muslim faith. Muslims are expected to take part at least once in their lifetimes if they are able. Muslims from China have made the trek to the Arabian Peninsula for centuries. Among the most famous are the accounts of Zheng He, a Chinese Muslim sailor who made four voyages to the Arabian Peninsula in the fifteenth century.<sup>87</sup>

China's Party-state tightly controls the number of its Muslim citizens permitted to undertake religious pilgrimage. According to Uyghur activists, the majority of permits to Mecca, part of a quota system set by the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, go to government officials and security guards accompanying the Hajj delegation from China. Although several international human rights declarations and covenants call on signatories and parties to allow citizens freedom of movement (see, e.g., Article 12 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and Article 13 of the International

---

<sup>85</sup> "Egypt, China sign technical cooperation document in specialized security fields," State Information Service, June 20, 2017, <https://www.sis.gov.eg/Story/114496>.

<sup>86</sup> Sara Gabr, Egyptian Commission on Rights and Freedoms. Interview by Lucille Greer. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 10, 2021.

<sup>87</sup> Hyunhee Park, "Mapping the Chinese and Islamic Worlds: Cross-Cultural Exchange in Pre-Modern Asia," Cambridge University Press, (September 2012), <https://www.cambridge.org/core/books/mapping-the-chinese-and-islamic-worlds/9554FAD722664734198974578D239BAD>.

Covenant on Civil and Political Rights<sup>88</sup>), Chinese law limits its Muslims citizens' participation in the Hajj to state-sponsored pilgrimages to Mecca. The 2001 XUAR Regulations on the Management of Religious Affairs restrict the movement of Muslims more explicitly by specifying that "pilgrimage activities are to be organized by the religious affairs departments of the people's governments and religious organizations. No other organization or individual may organize such activities."<sup>89</sup>

The Religious Affairs Bureau is charged by the State Council with overseeing China's participation in the Hajj. All seven agencies of the Religious Affairs Bureau are responsible for coordinating the process with the Saudi government, and the Chinese Islamic Association is tasked with organizing and implementing it. All other agencies are forbidden from organizing Hajj, Umrah, or disguised Hajj activities under any name or form.<sup>90</sup> These restrictions are stipulated in the Regulations on Religious Affairs, a document released by the State Council in 2004.<sup>91</sup> The document includes provisions stating that agencies of the Religious Affairs Bureau are responsible for halting unauthorized Hajj-organization for pilgrims. The "Provision on Forbidding Travel Agencies to Organize Go-Aboard Individual Hajj" (2005) identified the Hajj as "a political and policy-oriented religious activity associated with national unity, social stability, national security, and our country's international image."<sup>92</sup>

Beijing took Hajj restrictions a step further by building on its ties with Saudi Arabia to regulate the activities of third-party countries issuing travel documents. In 2006, Uyghur Muslims who had traveled to Pakistan seeking to undertake the Hajj pilgrimage—according to one estimate, as many as 6,000 in Rawalpindi—were

Uyghurs were told to return to China or face consequences including loss of government posts, loss of pensions for retirees, and punishment of family members.

<sup>88</sup> The PRC has ratified the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It is a signatory of International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights but has not ratified it. As a signatory, China has the obligation to act in good faith and not defeat the purpose of the ICCPR.

<sup>89</sup> "Xinjiang Police Reportedly Bar Uyghur Hajj Pilgrimage by Confiscating Passports," U.S. Congressional-Executive Commission on China, October 26, 2005, <https://www.cecc.gov/publications/commission-analysis/xinjiang-police-reportedly-bar-uyghur-haj-pilgrimage-by>.

<sup>90</sup> Ibid.

<sup>91</sup> "Regulations on Religious Affairs (Chinese and English Text)," Congressional-Executive Commission on China, February 9, 2011, <https://www.cecc.gov/resources/legal-provisions/regulations-on-religious-affairs>.

<sup>92</sup> Ibid.

refused visas by the Chinese Embassy in Islamabad, who was allegedly coordinating with its Saudi counterpart.<sup>93</sup> Uyghurs were told to return to China or face consequences including loss of government posts, loss of pensions for retirees, and punishment of family members. A senior Saudi official allegedly emerged from the Saudi Embassy and told protesters outside that it was not Saudi policy to deny visas to Muslims, but that the Saudi government was abiding with a Chinese request to not issue visas to Uyghurs. This policy change disrupted the usual overland route Uyghur Muslims took to Mecca and Medina. Now that Uyghurs could only apply from within the PRC, China could better control who could undertake Hajj and monitor them as they did so.

China's sharp securitization of policy with the 2014 "People's War on Terror" unleashed a raft of surveillance methods, putting serious pressure on the Hajj. XUAR police used the religious pilgrimage as an excuse to monitor and surveil participating Uyghurs. In August 2018, exactly 11,500 Chinese Muslims were expected to perform the Hajj. Before leaving the country, some of the pilgrims were given state-issued tracking devices in the form of "smart cards" attached to lanyards around their necks.<sup>94</sup> The devices bore GPS trackers and customized personal data. The state-run China Islamic Association defended the trackers, stating that they were intended to ensure the pilgrims' safety; stampedes at the Hajj have sometimes turned deadly and caused international incidents.<sup>95</sup> However, Human Rights Watch noted that China monitors Uyghur pilgrims not out of fear for individuals' safety because officials fear that religious pilgrimages could act as a "potential cover for subversive political activity."<sup>96</sup> In the context of China's systematic campaign to eradicate expressions of Uyghur identity, restrictions

---

<sup>93</sup> "East Turkestan: Pilgrims Denied Saudi Visas in Pakistan," UNPO, September 21, 2006, <https://unpo.org/article/5486>.

<sup>94</sup> Eva Dou, "Chinese Surveillance Expands to Muslims Making Pilgrimage to Mecca," Wall Street Journal, July 31, 2018, <https://www.wsj.com/articles/chinese-surveillance-expands-to-muslims-making-mecca-pilgrimage-1533045703>.

<sup>95</sup> Ruth Graham, "The Hajj Stampede: Why Do Crowds Run?" The Atlantic, September 26, 2015, <https://www.theatlantic.com/international/archive/2015/09/hajj-stampede-crowd-disasters/407542/>.

<sup>96</sup> Human Rights Watch, "One Passport, Two Systems: China's Restrictions on Foreign Travel by Tibetans and Others," July 13, 2015, <https://www.hrw.org/report/2015/07/13/one-passport-two-systems/chinas-restrictions-foreign-travel-tibetans-and-others>.

on the Hajj cannot be isolated from the ongoing genocide in the Uyghur Region.<sup>97</sup>

The use of Chinese surveillance technology is a unique feature in the period of transnational repression from 2014 to the present. With companies like Huawei expanding their footprints in Mecca and Medina, China has the opportunity to mine data of Muslim pilgrims and their contacts in the PRC. In 2016, the Saudi Ministry of Interior and Huawei collaborated to build a Unified Security Operations Center (911) to handle emergency calls during the Hajj season, the volume of which is a perennial problem for Saudi telecommunications infrastructure.<sup>98</sup> While Huawei claims it does not produce surveillance technology, the company's collaboration with Saudi authorities is important to monitor given the ability of the Party-state to utilize data connections to Saudi Arabia in order to repress Uyghurs and other Muslims in China. In 2019, a Muslim Uyghur was stopped at mainland China's border with Hong Kong and interrogated for three days because someone on his WeChat contact list had "checked in" at Mecca. The authorities expressed concern that the person had traveled on an unofficial pilgrimage to Mecca, a crime under Chinese law.<sup>99</sup> Should a pilgrim call 911 during Hajj or download an app during their visit, there could be consequences for them or their relatives in the XUAR.

The PRC is gathering biodata from Uyghurs in Arab states as a part of the Chinese securitization of Hajj. Ahmad Talip (AKA Ahmetjan Abdulla), who was arrested in 2018 in Dubai after going to a local police station to collect documents for his brother, told his wife that the Dubai police had taken a blood sample from him at the request of the Chinese government. A Dubai court judged that he should be freed, but when his wife Amanissa Talip went to pick him up, she learned he had been moved to a different prison and was in Interpol custody. She unsuccessfully appealed to Interpol and the <sup>98</sup> "2017 Annual Report," Huawei, https://www.huawei.com/-/media/corporate/pdf/annual-report/annual\_report2017\_en.pdf?la=en.

In 2019, a Muslim Uyghur was stopped at mainland China's border with Hong Kong and interrogated for three days because someone on his WeChat contact list had "checked in" at Mecca.

---

<sup>97</sup> Human Rights Watch, "'Break Their Lineage, Break Their Roots': China's Crimes Against Humanity Targeting Uyghurs and Other Turkic Minorities," April 19, 2021, <https://www.hrw.org/report/2021/04/19/break-their-lineage-break-their-roots/chinas-crimes-against-humanity-targeting>.

<sup>99</sup> Sarah Cook, "Worried about Huawei? Take a Look at Tencent," Freedom House, March 29, 2019, <https://freedomhouse.org/article/worried-about-huawei-take-closer-look-tencent?>.

UN to have him released, and officials in Dubai threatened to detain her and their entire family and deport them to China if she continued to press the case. Mr. Ahmad was transferred again; his wife has not heard from him since. She was told that he was deported to China and imprisoned two days after his last transfer.<sup>100</sup>

The Party-state has also used the Hajj as a mechanism to coerce Uyghurs residing in safer European jurisdictions to fly to Saudi Arabia where they are at risk. Norway-based Uyghur Omer Rozi said his mother was forcibly taken on Hajj by Chinese security services.<sup>101</sup> Once in Saudi Arabia, she called her son three times per day, urging him to join her. He refused. During their final phone call, he heard someone in the background yelling at her, confirming his suspicions that the entire operation was forced. He reportedly arranged for a friend of his from Norway to visit his mother, where he was surveilled by the intelligence agents who had accompanied her. Police later called him and issued four conditions for the release of his mother and two siblings who had also been detained: 1) do not buy a mosque in Norway; 2) avoid the Norwegian Uyghur diaspora; 3) do not send monetary aid to organizations in Turkey; and 4) take photos and collect intelligence for the police.<sup>102</sup>

In October 2020, the State Administration of Religious Affairs, subordinate to the United Front Work Department), published the document “Measures for the Administration of Islamic Hajj Affairs.” The measures detail regulations in 42 articles, which came into force on December 1, 2020. The measures are restrictive, limiting Hajj to pilgrims over the age of 60; they also stipulate that Hajj applicants are subject to security checks by Chinese authorities before being granted permission to travel to Mecca. Uyghurs who are accepted are expected to undergo courses in reeducation centers, deterring many from applying. Regional and local quotas were established for Chinese pilgrims allowed to go to Mecca in these measures. All pilgrimages were to be organized and managed by the Chinese

---

<sup>100</sup> “Uyghur Speaks Out About Husband’s ‘Deportation’ From UAE,” Middle East Eye, February 8, 2021, <https://www.middleeasteye.net/news/uyghur-speaks-out-against-husbands-deportation-uae>.

<sup>101</sup> Omer Rozi, “Witness Statement – Summary Witness Statement,” Uyghur Tribunal, <https://uyghurtribunal.com/wp-content/uploads/2021/06/06-1225-JUN-21-UTFW-030-Omer-Rozi-English.pdf>.

<sup>102</sup> Ibid.

Islamic Association with criminal charges applied to those who did not.<sup>103</sup> Article 12.1 provides that the religious and social life of the candidate to Hajj will be examined, and only those found to be “patriotic and of good conduct” will be eligible.

These regulations, combined with the ability of authorities in the PRC to track and surveil pilgrims to Mecca, have turned the Hajj into yet another tool of control and surveillance. Because a limited number of Chinese Muslims can still make the trek to Mecca, the Party-state is able to claim that they have guaranteed religious liberty to Muslim citizens of the PRC. Most Chinese Muslims would prefer not to submit the application and have their “patriotic” attitudes and loyalty to the Party scrutinized. Anyone considering “unofficial” pilgrimages faces criminal penalties.

Passport Weaponization

Passports are notoriously difficult for Uyghurs to obtain, and recent refugee crises have caused recalibration of the state’s approach to passport policies. As many as 30,000 Uyghur refugees arrived in Turkey between 2010 to 2016, both from human trafficking networks across Southeast Asia and a short-lived period in 2015–16 in which XUAR authorities relaxed passport application requirements for Uyghurs across the region. As Sean Roberts notes, this period of relative relaxation allowed Uyghurs to flee to Turkey.<sup>104</sup> Although the reasons for this seemingly accommodationist and short-lived Chinese policy remain unknown, Roberts suggests it may have been an early effort to assist regional surveillance, as passport applications in the Uyghur Region required biometric data, voice samples, and 3D images.<sup>105</sup> By late October 2016, the policy was reversed and it again became extremely difficult for Uyghurs to receive passports; many had their passports taken by the Xinjiang PSB for “safekeeping” beginning that Fall. Efforts to control Uyghur mobility have also grown more

---

<sup>103</sup> “Pilgrimage to Mecca Only Allowed for ‘Patriotic’ Chinese Muslims,” World Uyghur Congress, October 13, 2020, <https://www.uyghurcongress.org/en/pilgrimage-to-mecca-allowed-only-for-patriotic-chinese-muslims/>.

<sup>104</sup> Sean Roberts, The War on the Uyghurs: China’s Internal Campaign against a Muslim Minority (Princeton; Oxford: Princeton University Press), 2020, 186.

<sup>105</sup> Ibid.

draconian. Police documents leaked from the XUAR detention facilities in Qaraqash County suggest that between 2017 and 2019, some Uyghurs were sent to re-education centers merely for applying for passports.<sup>106</sup> Around the world, meanwhile, embassy officials routinely inform overseas Uyghurs the only way to renew their passports is to return to China using government-issued one-way travel documents back to the Uyghur Region, where they face arbitrary arrest or detention.<sup>107</sup> Passport processes and policies in China facilitate its system of mass surveillance in defiance of international law.<sup>108</sup>

These practices have also impacted the Uyghur community in Arab states. According to an anonymous informant, Uyghurs residing in Saudi Arabia claimed that in January 2020, the Chinese Embassy in Riyadh had refused to issue any passports to their community since 2018, supplying only one-way travel documents back to China.<sup>109</sup> According to the same informant, Uyghur students in Saudi Arabia sent a letter to the Chinese consulate in Jeddah asking why passports had been issued but received no response.

According to an anonymous informant, many Uyghur residents fled the Kingdom for Turkey before their passports expired.<sup>110</sup> According to the same interviewee, the Chinese diplomatic establishment briefly intensified its communications with the Uyghur community in Saudi Arabia in late 2016. Chinese diplomats asked Uyghur residents what the “dominant ideological trends” among overseas students were, how they were impacted by Wahhabism,<sup>111</sup> and their thoughts on the Kingdom’s internal politics, according to our source.

Uyghurs residing in Saudi Arabia claimed that in January 2020, the Chinese Embassy in Riyadh had refused to issue any passports to their community since 2018, supplying only one-way travel documents back to China.

<sup>106</sup> Uyghur Human Rights Project, “Ideological Transformation: Records of Mass Detention from Qaraqash, Hotan,” February 2020, https://docs.uhrp.org/pdf/UHRP\_QaraqashDocument.pdf.

<sup>107</sup> Uyghur Human Rights Project, “Weaponized Passports: The Crisis of Uyghur Statelessness,” April 1, 2020, <https://uhrp.org/report/weaponized-passports-the-crisis-of-uyghur-statelessness/>.

<sup>108</sup> Ibid.

<sup>109</sup> “Uyghurs in Saudi Arabia Flee to Turkey as Chinese Embassy Ends Passport Renewals,” RFA, January 31, 2020, <https://www.rfa.org/english/news/uyghur/turkey-01312020165513.html>.

<sup>110</sup> Local observer, interview by Lucy Greer, 2021.

<sup>111</sup> Rachel Harris, “Islam by smartphone: reading the Uyghur Islamic revival on WeChat,” Central Asian Survey 38, no. 1 (2018): 61–81, <https://www.tandfonline.com/doi/abs/10.1080/02634937.2018.1492904>.

According to the same source, members of the Saudi Uyghur community reported losing contact with their relatives in the Uyghur Region starting in early 2017.<sup>112</sup> Their relatives back home have asked that they stop calling and not respond to telephone calls or WeChat messages. Some Saudi Uyghurs have made inquiries with the Chinese consulate, only to be ignored or informed that “the situation was too sensitive” for further inquiries to be made.<sup>113</sup> The Chinese consulate in Saudi Arabia also ceased to renew passports for Uyghurs living in the Kingdom in 2017, only providing them with a one-way ticket back to the PRC and almost certain detention. The Chinese embassy and consulate have disputed the charge that they have suspended consular services for their Uyghur “brothers and sisters.”<sup>114</sup>

According to the same KII, ten Uyghur graduates from the Islamic University of Madinah were found to have been detained in Chinese camps on account of their studies in Saudi Arabia after they voluntarily returned to China. We could only independently identify Jarallah Rahmatullah at the time of publishing this report.<sup>115</sup> All graduated from the College of Sharia, the College of the Holy Qur’an, or the College of Dawa.

These stories are part of a trend of closer cooperation between Riyadh and Beijing. Since 2017, Saudi authorities have deported to China at least eight Uyghurs who were either visiting the country on Hajj or living in the country legally. Saudi officials have also expressed public support for Party-state policies regarding Uyghurs. On a state visit to Beijing in February 2019, Saudi Crown Prince Mohammad bin Salman made a public statement in support of China’s treatment of the Uyghurs.<sup>116</sup> In 2020, the country joined 45 others in signing a letter of support for China’s campaign of mass

---

<sup>112</sup> Ruth Ingram, “What Happens When the Uyghurs Come Home?” The Diplomat, November 6, 2019, <https://thediplomat.com/2019/11/what-happens-when-the-uyghurs-come-home/>.

<sup>113</sup> “Uyghurs in Saudi Arabia Flee to Turkey As Chinese Embassy Ends Passport Renewals,” RFA, January 31, 2020, <https://www.rfa.org/english/news/uyghur/turkey-01312020165513.html>.

<sup>114</sup> Anuj Chopra, “Chinese Uyghurs in Saudi face impossible choice,” AFP, <https://autos.yahoo.com/chinese-uyghurs-saudi-face-impossible-choice-021812491.html>.

<sup>115</sup> “Victim Entry 13960,” Xinjiang Victims Database, January 6, 2021 <https://shahit.biz/eng/view/entry.php?entryno=13960>.

<sup>116</sup> “Saudi crown prince defends China’s right to fight ‘terrorism,’” Al Jazeera, February 23, 2019, <https://www.aljazeera.com/news/2019/2/23/saudi-crown-prince-defends-chinas-right-to-fight-terrorism>.

detention in the XUAR.<sup>117</sup> Growing Chinese collaboration with the Kingdom is an about-face for Saudi policy, which previously protected Uyghurs as permanent residents due to their status as oppressed Muslims.<sup>118</sup>

Data we collected also suggests growing monitoring and attempts to restrict movements of the Uyghur population in the UAE. We conducted two interviews with Uyghurs who fled the UAE, both of whom requested anonymity for fear of danger. One interviewee recounted that she had lived comfortably in Dubai from the time she moved there in 2012 until 2017 when police in her hometown in the Uyghur Region began questioning her family. “They would call my brother and ask questions about me. They also asked him to send them photographs of me,” she said. After three years of phone calls and messages from Xinjiang Public Security Bureau officers, she decided to move to Canada, where she has been ever since.<sup>119</sup>

Similarly, another anonymous interviewee who lived in the UAE from 2008 to July 2019 informed us he had also received calls from police in the Uyghur Region after 2017. “[Police officers in the Uyghur Region] told me they visited my family and wanted to know when I would be coming back to visit them,” he said. He lost all contact with his family when he fled to the United States in 2019.<sup>120</sup>

That same year, a Uyghur man named Ablikim Yusuf was held in Doha’s Hamad International Airport in Qatar under threat of forcible deportation to China when his video testifying to his situation went viral. He had been traveling not with a passport but with a travel document that would have only allowed him to return to China. His testimony galvanized Uyghur activists, who called on members of the international community to prevent his rendition to

“[Police officers in the Uyghur Region] told me they visited my family and wanted to know when I would be coming back to visit them.”

<sup>117</sup> Catherine Putz, “2020 Edition: Which Countries Are For or Against China’s Xinjiang Policies?,” The Diplomat, October 9, 2020, <https://thediplomat.com/2020/10/2020-edition-which-countries-are-for-or-against-chinas-xinjiang-policies/>.

<sup>118</sup> Mohammed Al-Sudairi, “The Communist Party of China’s United Front Work in the Gulf: The ‘Ethnic Minority Overseas Chinese’ of Saudi Arabia as a Case Study,” King Faisal Center for Research and Islamic Studies, March 2018, <https://kfcris.com/pdf/364dd98d47dae1c81e9eb8362a086bf85af3e7e7f302e.pdf>.

<sup>119</sup> Anonymous interview with a Uyghur now living in Canada. Interview by Bradley Jardine. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 15, 2021.

<sup>120</sup> Anonymous interview with a Uyghur now living in the United States. Interview by Bradley Jardine. Online video chat. Washington, DC, June 24, 2021.

the PRC.<sup>121</sup> Mr. Ablikim was eventually transferred to the United States.

V. China's Engagement with Arab States over Time

Collaboration between China and Arab states is not entirely new. Through interactions on the Silk Road, the countries have a shared history spanning the rise and fall of dynasties and caliphates over many centuries. While historical, religious, and cultural links provide positive talking points for Chinese and Arab officials, they do very little to technically inform Chinese-Arab relations today,<sup>122</sup> the nature of which is fundamentally different from the Silk Road rhetoric deployed by all sides.<sup>123</sup> In the twentieth century, the PRC was at first hindered in making connections with Arab states that still recognized the Republic of China (Taiwan). The PRC also backed revolutionary movements in the Arabian Peninsula, which was a source of tension for Gulf countries.<sup>124</sup> Relations slowly smoothed with China's outreach to Egypt in the 1950s. Egypt was the first Arab and African country to recognize the PRC, adopt the "One China" policy, and support the PRC's campaign to be the Chinese representative in the United Nations (over the Republic of China).<sup>125</sup> Real momentum for regional ties came in the 1980s and 1990s, the period that saw China's return to the international arena under Deng Xiaoping as well as a rising need for oil imports in the PRC.

---

<sup>121</sup> Megha Rajagopalan, "A Muslim Man Who Had Faced Deportation to China From Qatar is Now Headed to the U.S.," Buzzfeed, August 6, 2019, <https://www.buzzfeednews.com/article/meghara/ablikim-yusuf-ughur-qatar-china>.

<sup>122</sup> Hyunhee Park, Mapping the Chinese and Islamic Worlds: Cross-Cultural Exchange in Pre-Modern Asia. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2012, 191. doi:10.1017/CBO9781139088329.

<sup>123</sup> For a comprehensive examination of Chinese-Middle East relations, see The Routledge Handbook on China - Middle East Relations, edited by Jonathan Fulton, 2022.

<sup>124</sup> Jonathan Fulton, China's Relations with the Gulf Monarchies. London: Routledge, 2018.

<sup>125</sup> Mordechai Chaziza, "Comprehensive Strategic Partnership: A New Stage in China-Egypt Relations," Middle East Review of International Affairs (Online), Vol. 20, (3) 2016, 41–50.

China has Comprehensive Strategic Partnership agreements with three of the Arab states included in this survey—Egypt (2014), Saudi Arabia (2016), and the UAE (2018)—and Strategic Partnership Agreements with two—Qatar (2014) and Morocco (2016).<sup>126</sup> These agreements are not alliances, since the PRC has had a firm non-alliance policy since 1982,<sup>127</sup> but instead frameworks that China uses in its foreign policy to structure bilateral relations with provisions for cooperation across a spectrum of policy areas from trade and investment to telecommunications and security.

Establishment of Diplomatic Relations between the PRC and Arab Partner Countries in Transnational Repression
Egypt	1956
Syria	1956
Morocco	1958
UAE	1984
Qatar	1988
Saudi Arabia	1990

Table 2. Establishment of diplomatic relations between the PRC and Arab partner countries. Source: state and international media.<sup>128</sup>

<sup>126</sup> “Morocco Eyes Mutual Benefit Under Belt and Road Initiative,” Xinhua, May 8, 2017, http://www.xinhuanet.com/english/2017-05/08/c\_136266021.htm; Mordechai Chaziza, “Comprehensive Strategic Partnership: A New Stage in China-Egypt Relations,” Middle East Review of International Affairs (Online), Vol. 20, Iss. 3 (2016): 41-50; Mordechai Chaziza, “China-Bahrain Relations in the Age of the Belt and Road Initiative,” Strategic Assessment, Vol. 23, No. 4 (October 2020).

<sup>127</sup> “Strangers to Strategic Partners: Thirty Years of Sino-Saudi Relations,” Atlantic Council, August 2020 https://www.atlanticcouncil.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/08/Sino-Saudi-Relations\_WEB.pdf.

<sup>128</sup> Mordechai Chaziza, “China-Bahrain Relations in the Age of the Belt and Road Initiative,” Strategic Assessment, 23, no. 4 (October 2020); “Basic Facts,” Embassy of the People’s Republic of China in the Arab Republic of Egypt, January 7, 2003, <http://eg.china-embassy.org/eng/zaigx/jyj/t76340.htm>; “Interview: China-Morocco Relations Start New Journey after 60 Years of Diplomatic Ties,” Xinhua, October 20, 2018, http://www.xinhuanet.com/english/2018-10/20/c\_137545019.htm; “China-Qatar Cooperation Benefits Both Countries,” Xinhua, June 23, 2008, <http://lr.chineseembassy.org/eng/gyzg/a123/t468200.htm>; “China and Saudi Arabia,”

Image 1. Chinese bilateral trade volume with Arab states in USD, 2000–2019. Source: UN Comtrade Database.<sup>129</sup>

China's trade and investment in Arab states have grown steadily since the 1990s. However, greater momentum was granted to China's ties with Arab states with the 2013 launch of the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI). The BRI, which scholar Anna Hayes has suggested might have been unplanned,<sup>130</sup> has developed into a major diplomatic and economic initiative to connect China over land and sea to over 130 countries and 29 international organizations around the world,<sup>131</sup> and was officially added to the PRC's

Consulate-General of the People's Republic of China in Jeddah, November 26, 2004, <https://www.fmprc.gov.cn/ce/cgjed/eng/zsgx/t172060.htm>; "Syria, China Sign Economic and Technical Cooperation Agreement," The Syrian Observer, March 5, 2020, <https://syrianobserver.com/news/56483/syria-china-sign-economic-and-technical-cooperation-agreement.html>; "China and the United Arab Emirates," Embassy of the People's Republic of China in the United Arab Emirates, <http://ae.china-embassy.org/eng/sbgx/t150466.htm>.

<sup>129</sup> "UN Comtrade Database," United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs, <https://comtrade.un.org/data/>.

<sup>130</sup> Anna Hayes, "Interwoven 'Destinies': The Significance of Xinjiang to the China Dream, the Belt and Road Initiative, and the Xi Jinping Legacy," Journal of Contemporary China, 29, no. 121, (May 30, 2019): 31-45, accessed March 13, 2022, <https://www.tandfonline.com/doi/abs/10.1080/10670564.2019.1621528>.

<sup>131</sup> Philipp Galkin, Dongmei Chen and Junyuang Ke, "China's Energy Investment Through the Lens of the Belt and Road Initiative," King Abdullah Petroleum Studies and Research Center, (December 2019), <https://www.kapsarc.org/research/publications/chinas-energy-investment-through-the-lens-of-the-belt-and-road-initiative/>.

constitution along with other tenets of “Xi Jinping Thought” in 2017.<sup>132</sup> As a geostrategic hub in the global BRI chain, the Uyghur Region has garnered significant infrastructure investment from Beijing, which seeks to utilize the region’s Islamic culture and geographical connections to project its influence and move goods into Eurasia and the Middle East.<sup>133</sup> All 22 countries in the Arab world have some form of BRI agreement with China. They are also participants in the BRI through the Arab League.<sup>134</sup>

Belt and Road Initiative Partner Countries Engaged in Transnational Repression of Uyghurs
Country	Date of Initial BRI MoU	Attended Belt and Road Forum 2017	Attended Belt and Road Forum 2019
Egypt	2016	X	X
Morocco	2017		X
Qatar	2014		X
Saudi Arabia	2016	X	X
The UAE	2018	X	X

Table 3. Belt and Road Initiative Partner Countries in the Arab world. Source: State and International Media.<sup>135</sup>

<sup>132</sup> “China to enshrine Xi’s thought into state constitution amid national ‘fervor,’” Reuters, January 19, 2018, <https://www.reuters.com/article/us-china-politics/china-to-enshrine-xi-thought-into-state-constitution-amid-national-fervor-idUSKBN1F812P>.

<sup>133</sup> Anna Hayes, “‘Interwoven ‘Destinies’: The Significance of Xinjiang to the China Dream, the Belt and Road Initiative, and the Xi Jinping Legacy,” Journal of Contemporary China, 29, no. 121, (May 30, 2019): 31-45, <https://www.tandfonline.com/doi/pdf/10.1080/10670564.2019.1621528>.

<sup>134</sup> “Declaration of Action on China-Arab States Cooperation Under the Belt and Road Initiative,” China-Arab Cooperation Forum, 2018, <http://www.chinaarabcf.org/chn/lthyjwx/bzjhywj/dbjbzjhy/P020180726404036530409.pdf>.

<sup>135</sup> Helen Chin and, Winnie He, “The Belt and Road Initiative: 65 Countries and Beyond,” Fung Business Intelligence Centre, (May 2016); “Belt and Road Attendees List,” The Diplomat, May 13, 2017, <https://thediplomat.com/2017/05/belt-and-road-attendees-list/>; “Full Text: List of Deliverables of Belt and Road Forum,” Xinhua, 2017, http://www.xinhuanet.com/english/2017-05/15/c\_136286376.htm; “Second Belt and Road Forum Top-Level Attendees,” The Diplomat, April 27, 2019, <https://thediplomat.com/2019/04/second-belt-and-road-forum-top-level-attendees/>; “China, Bahrain Ink MOU to Promote Belt and Road Initiative,” Xinhua, July 10, 2018, http://www.xinhuanet.com/english/2018-07/10/c\_137312832.htm; “China, Egypt Sign MoU

Uyghurs in the Arab States

As China's economic engagement in Arab states has increased, so has its interest in the region's Uyghur population. The Uyghur population (often known in Arab states as "Turkistani") outflow from the Uyghur Region to Saudi Arabia and Egypt began in the 19th and 20th centuries following a succession of short-lived East Turkistan emirates and republics. Migrants from Central Asia (mainly Uzbek) and the Uyghur Region adopted the label "Turkestani," referring to the indigenous name for the region ("Turkistan"). There is no consensus on how many Uyghurs live in Arab states, and sources vary widely on the matter.

The Uyghur diaspora reconnected with their historic homeland in the Uyghur Region in the 1980s. With the end of the Cultural Revolution (1966–1976), the Party-state under Deng Xiaoping ushered in an era of reform, with religious ceremonies and practices becoming more visible in Uyghur cultural life. Uyghur youth could study in Arab states and elsewhere with greater ease due to relaxed travel restrictions. Many Uyghurs took advantage of the policy shift to go on Hajj, which was allowed to resume in 1979.<sup>136</sup> Wealthy Uyghurs from Saudi Arabia helped facilitate these travels.<sup>137</sup>

By 1988, the CCP grew increasingly suspicious of ties between the Uyghur Region and Arab states, with concern that conservative Islamic doctrines, such as Saudi Wahhabism, were taking root on Boosting Cooperation under Belt and Road Initiative," China Daily, January 21, 2016, https://www.chinadaily.com.cn/world/2016xivisitmiddleeast/2016-01/21/content\_23189266.htm; "China, Morocco Sign MOU on Belt and Road," Xinhua, November 17, 2017, http://www.xinhuanet.com/english/2017-11/17/c\_136760746.htm; "Qatar among First to Support Belt & Road Initiative," The Peninsula Qatar, April 27, 2019, <https://thepeninsulaqatar.com/article/27/04/2019/Qatar-among-first-to-support-Belt-Road-Initiative>; "UAE, China Sign MoU on Silk Road Initiative," Gulf News, November 7, 2018, <https://gulfnews.com/uae/government/uae-china-sign-mou-on-silk-road-initiative-1.2254535>; "List of Deliverables of the Second Belt and Road Forum for International Cooperation," Foreign Ministry of the People's Republic of China, 2019, https://www.fmprc.gov.cn/mfa\_eng/zxx\_x\_662805/t1658767.shtml.

---

<sup>136</sup> Yitzhak Shichor, "Blow Up: Internal and External Challenges of Uyghur Separatism and Islamic Radicalism to Chinese Rule in Xinjiang," Asian Affairs: An American Review, 32, no. 2, (2005): 122; Edmund Waite, "The impact of the State on Islam Amongst the Uyghurs: Religious Knowledge and Authority in the Kashgar Oasis," Central Asian Survey 25, no. 3 (2006): 251-265.

<sup>137</sup> Mohammed Al-Sudairi, "The Communist Party of China's United Front Work in the Gulf: The 'Ethnic Minority Overseas Chinese' of Saudi Arabia as a Case Study," King Faisal Center for Research and Islamic Studies, March 2018, <https://kfcris.com/pdf/364dd98d47dae1c81e9eb8362a086bf85af3e7e7f302e.pdf>.

The PRC's current policy calculus requires the Uyghur Region to be thoroughly Sinicized and insulated from compatriots in Arab states. These states have tremendous sway in the Muslim world and have played an important role in the Uyghur Region's political development.

among the Uyghurs.<sup>138</sup> Concerned that growing ethnic nationalism and Islamic revivalism abroad might catch on in the Uyghur Region, China entered a new era of repression in which any expression of Uyghur discontent would be met with zero tolerance, in effect, eliminating what little space had remained for civil society to criticize state policy. On April 5, 1990, demonstrations allegedly led by an “Islamic nationalist group” resulted in violence in the town of Baren, near Kashgar.<sup>139</sup> The protests likely emerged organically in response to local authorities enforcing the one-child policy, according to a local account at the time. When security forces tried to forcibly disperse Uyghur protestors, violence broke out. Official sources named the events a “counter-revolutionary rebellion” and claimed 22 died from the violence, including seven security force members. Unofficial sources estimated up to 50 protestors died.<sup>140</sup>

The combined events of the Baren revolt and the collapse of the Soviet Union fundamentally altered China's security calculations on its western frontier. Fearing growing religiosity from Pakistan, and the potential rise of nationalist sentiments with the emergence of post-Soviet ethnic kin states across the border, China's authorities embarked on a dramatic reversal of the relaxed political atmosphere of the Uyghur Region in the Deng Xiaoping era. These restrictions on Islam and the manipulation of the Global War on Terror culminated in part in China's pursuit of Uyghurs in the Arab world, where they have been viewed as suspicious and forced to return to the Uyghur Region, where they face almost certain detention and repression.

VI. Conclusion

The PRC's current policy calculus requires the Uyghur Region to be thoroughly Sinicized and insulated from compatriots in Arab states. These states have tremendous sway in the Muslim

---

<sup>138</sup> Ibid.

<sup>139</sup> Amnesty International, “People's Republic of China: Gross Violations of Human Rights in the Xinjiang Uighur Autonomous Region,” April 21, 1999, <https://www.refworld.org/pd/3ae6a9eb0.pdf>.

<sup>140</sup> Ibid.

world and have played an important role in the Uyghur Region's political development. The two holiest cities of Islam and the sites of Hajj and Umrah pilgrimages connect Saudi Arabia with every corner of the Islamic world. Likewise, Egypt is a vibrant place in international Islam with its history of Islamic civilization and, more crucially, its religious institutions like Al-Azhar Mosque and University. The transnational linkages between the Arab States and the Uyghur Region have now been weaponized in the Party-state's campaign of transnational repression of Uyghurs.

According to our analysis, transnational repression of Uyghurs in Arab states has consistently been on the rise since 2001 and the advent of the Global War on Terror. The PRC's increasing economic and political interests paved the way for the inclusion of Arab states in China's campaign of transnational repression against Uyghurs and other Turkic peoples. The religious and cultural draw to the countries of the Arab world for Uyghurs have inadvertently made the Party-state's campaign all the more effective. Arab states, who have their own troubled record on human rights and are eager to foster a profitable relationship with the Party-state are natural partners for Beijing in its transnational repression efforts.

China utilizes multiple methods of transnational repression against Uyghurs across Arab states. These methods began with simply labeling Uyghurs as "terrorists" in the aftermath of the Global War on Terror and the U.S. government's designation of the ETIM as a "terrorist" group but have since grown more complex and varied. Today, the Party-state uses the IJOP to identify overseas Uyghurs and their families who remain at home, coercion-by-proxy by putting pressure on their families, public smear campaigns to undermine the credibility of whistleblowers, and growing use of United Front work to monitor Uyghurs living in Arab states, restrict the Hajj pilgrimage, and intimidate students studying at Islamic institutions. Growing cooperation between China and Arab governments on issues relating to the region's Uyghur community appears to be on the rise. The human rights implications will be immense if the international community fails to call regional governments to account.

VII. Recommendations

Based on the findings of this report, we recommend that governments around the world and institutions of Islamic education in Arab states take the following steps to counter China's use of transnational repression in this region:

Recommendations for Governments

- Pass measures to protect Uyghur refugees. Governments should establish safe pathways for Uyghurs outside China to apply for resettlement without the need for UNHCR processing. For example, the U.S. Department of State should consider setting ambitious quotas for Uyghurs. Likewise, the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate should pass the complementary Uyghur Human Rights Protection Acts, which grant Priority 2 status for Uyghur and Turkic refugees.
- Strengthen refugee resettlement programs by increasing quotas and streamlining procedures. Governments should increase their quota of refugees from China and from third countries that are likely to extradite citizens to China. A large number of Uyghurs around the world fear applying for asylum in case governments or other bodies alert Chinese officials.
- Concerned governments should prioritize policies and diplomatic efforts to counter third-country governments' complicity in China's transitional repression. Clandestine cooperation between Chinese and Arab-state security services in human rights violations undermines the rule of law and democratic norms and is contrary to many countries' interests in the region.
- Uphold the non-refoulement principle. Under international law, governments are prohibited from sending individuals back to countries where they would be at risk of persecution, torture, ill-treatment, or other serious human rights violations.

- Impose targeted sanctions on officials from China and Arab states responsible for acts of transnational repression. International sanction mechanisms like the Global Magnitsky Act should be triggered in response to the grave human rights violations carried out by China and Arab states against the Uyghur diaspora. By triggering these provisions, key groups and security personnel perpetrating these crimes can have their assets frozen and travel restricted.
- Appoint a UN Special Rapporteur on Transnational Repression. The UN Human Rights Council should appoint an individual to “examine, monitor, advise, and publicly report” on issues of transnational repression globally. A UN-sanctioned report on these topics will raise public awareness and help concerned states to cooperate on countering these practices.
- Improve digital security among UNHCR and other INGOs that work with refugees. INGOs are entrusted with refugees’ personal information. This information must be protected and remain confidential. Current procedures and policies do not necessarily guarantee those protections.
- Approach the issue through international Islamic organizations. Arab countries are leaders in organizations like the Organisation for Islamic Cooperation (OIC) and Muslim World League. Arab state representatives can retable issues surrounding Chinese policy in the XUAR and craft a critical response, which could effect meaningful change as the collective voice of the Muslim world. This multilateral route has the added benefit of shielding each state’s individual bilateral relationship with China.
- Utilize support from the international community on China’s Uyghur policies. Arab countries are firm partners with western countries like the United States who are vocal critics of China’s genocidal policies in the Uyghur Region. Arab countries should align with these natural partners and harness this international support for policy shifts that acknowledge the reality of CCP policy in the XUAR and halt Chinese transnational repression in the region.

Recommendations for Institutions of Islamic Education in Arab States

- University officials must intervene with their governments to urge the immediate release of Uyghur students. Officials at Islamic universities have influence with their home governments. These connections should be harnessed to find missing students and graduates who have disappeared into the network of Chinese camps and secure their release.
- Facilitate registration procedures for Uyghur students. The Chinese embassy in Cairo obstructs access to official documents needed for registering at Al-Azhar University. Islamic universities should circumnavigate Chinese officials during the registration process where possible, as requesting documents can mark a student for surveillance, detention, and possible rendition.
- Ensure that no foreign students of other nationalities are subjected to security harassment that hinders their studies. Students must be allowed to continue their studies peacefully without interference from state security services or law enforcement agencies without reason.

© 2022 Uyghur Human Rights Project
1602 L Street NW | Washington, DC 20036
+1.202.478.1920 | www.uhrp.org | info@uhrp.org

© 2022 Oxus Society for Central Asian Affairs
www.oxussociety.org | info@oxussociety.com